

Manuscript Format

Title Page

The title page should include a clear title of the article, along with the article type and the journal name. Provide complete details (affiliation, and contact information) of the authors. The corresponding author should be represented with a special character on the name.

1. Title

2. Article Type

Research article, Review article, Mini-Review, Case Report, Short Communication, Opinion, Letter to Editor...etc.,

3. Journal Name

4. Author Details

Author¹, Author^{2*} and Author³

1. Author's Department, University, Country, E-Mail

2. Author's Department, University, Country, E-Mail

3. Author's Department, University, Country, E-Mail

*Corresponding Author

Name, Author's Department, Address, City, State, Country, Phone No:

E-mail:

Abstract:

An abstract is required in the manuscript and it should be self-contained, without citations, and should not exceed 350 words.

Keywords:

Present a set of carefully selected keywords that encapsulate the essence of your research. These keywords ensure increased visibility and accessibility for readers and researchers alike.

Abbreviations:

Present a comprehensive list of abbreviations utilized throughout the article to enhance the reading experience. These abbreviations will contribute to a better understanding of the content.

Introduction:

This section should be concise, without any subheadings.

Suitable Section Headings:

Provide suitable section headings to justify the format of the article.

Results and Discussion:

This segment can be subdivided into sections or consolidated as needed.

Conclusion:

In this section, you typically want to summarize the key findings and insights presented in the article. Remember to keep the conclusion concise and focused while ensuring it effectively ties together the various components of the article.

Conflicts of Interest:

In the “Conflicts of Interest” section of an article, you need to disclose any financial, personal, or professional associations that could potentially influence the interpretation or presentation of the research.

Acknowledgments:

The acknowledgment section of an article (if any) typically provides an opportunity to express gratitude and recognition to individuals or institutions that have contributed to the research, writing, or publication process.

References:

Mention the list of all the sources you cited or consulted during the research and writing process. This section is crucial for readers who want to explore the sources that inform the content of the article. Sources must be cited using the MLA referencing style. Assign sequential numbers to each reference in the list, ensuring that every citation in the text corresponds to the respective serial number in the references section.

Tables/Figures:

Ensure that all figures integrated into the manuscript are referenced in the text and maintain a high resolution of 300 dpi to enhance reader comprehension. Each figure should be accompanied by an appropriate legend, and it is imperative to avoid any copyright concerns associated with the figures.

Consecutively cite tables in the text, ensuring each table is accompanied by a title. Additionally, tables should be presented in an editable format.

Supplementary Materials:

The Supplementary Materials section of an article provides additional details, data, or information that supports and enhances the main content of the paper.

Symbols/Units:

Symbols should be used while referring to alpha (α), beta (β), mu (μ), pi (π), etc., Present measurements using the International System of Units (SI).